THE WEEK OF FROU-PROU.

The Courrier des Etats Unia, in comparing "FROU-PROU" at the FIFTH AVENUE. THEATRE and at the FFETH AVENUE. THEATRE and at the FFETH AVENUE. THEATRE and at the French Theatre, makes the following acknowledgment of the production at the former:

AD Daly's theatre, in the first place, the house itself is what is the most frou-fron-e real jewel box, mirrors, gold, carvings, &c. As for the furniture, a nest of down is not softer, easier than these pillows upon which lace has fallen like snow-takes—all is saith, tassels and plumes; it is as siren's boudoir. And then the scenery—such scenery! There is that of the third act, where is framed in a mass of gilt moudings a portrait of Gilberte Miss Ethel herself, very perfect, and in the same, costome which ahe wears in the act; a flood, in fact, a cloud of muslins, this portrait is as frou-frou as the model. Finally, the dresses. For these alone one would go and be suffocated by the perfume of amber and orris with which this bonbonnier is impregnated. In brief, toilets, scenery, atmosphere and all are a frou-frou which intoxicates.
